

About our Presenters

Amy Sinclair, Regional Representative for Australia, New Zealand and the Pacific at the Business & Human Rights Resource Centre

Amy is the Regional Representative for Australia, New Zealand and the Pacific at the Business & Human Rights Resource Centre, a leading international NGO tracking the human rights policies and performance of companies worldwide.

Amy works to reduce exploitation and abuse by advancing respect for human rights in business. She advises NGOs, companies and governments on business and human rights law, policy and strategies for change. Amy has been at the forefront of recent corporate human rights developments in Australia, including the creation of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth) requiring large companies to report publicly on actions to address modern slavery in their activities and supply chains. Amy is appointed to the Australian Government's Expert Advisory Committee on Modern Slavery. She is an Adjunct Lecturer in Law at UNSW and is a frequent public commentator on business and human rights developments. Amy was formerly a corporate lawyer, practicing with major international legal practices in Australia, Hong Kong and the UK.

