

Larina Alick
Executive Counsel
Nine Publishing (formerly Fairfax Media)

Larina Alick is Executive Counsel at Nine, providing legal advice for its newspapers The Sydney Morning Herald, The Age and The Australian Financial Review, and its other news outlets in print and online, and on radio and television. Larina provides pre-publication advice on news articles and their related social media posts, as well as running defamation litigation that now routinely includes social media posts as matters complained of. Larina is currently acting for The Herald in defending the defamation claim brought by Dylan Voller, over a member of the public's reply to a Facebook post, which is on appeal to the High Court of Australia. Larina previously worked at News Corp Australia, and the British Broadcasting Corporation and Schillings Lawyers in London.