I'm a recent Law Grad currently working at a Commercial law firm. I joined law so I could avoid numbers, more specifically the ethnic pressure of being good at maths. But it doesn't matter anyways because I get enough pressure from pay roll asking me why I put down 17 hours as my lunch break instead of one. I just didn't realise my time sheet was in 24 hours . I am personally excited to enter into the Golden Gavel comedic competition to finally have a Plan B in case law doesn't work out and my life becomes a joke.
