

Corrie Goodhand

Barrister, Black Chambers

Corrie was admitted to practice in 1999 as a solicitor and was called to the Bar in 2015. Corrie has over 20 years' legal experience in a variety of areas of the law including criminal law, parole matters, serious and high risk offenders, mental health and intentional torts.

Corrie grew up in Darwin and received her Bachelor of Laws from the Northern Territory University (now known as Charles Darwin University). She has since obtained a Masters in Health Law from the University of Sydney, Masters in Forensic Mental Health at the University of New South Wales, and is currently undertaking a Masters of Philosophy (Research) at UNSW on 'A retrospective cohort study of the occurrence of criminal justice system and health contact(s) in persons prior such persons being found Not Guilty by Mental Illness (NGMI), in New South Wales'. In August 2020, Corrie was appointed an Adjunct Senior Lecturer in the School of Psychiatry, UNSW Medicine.

THE LAW SOCIETY
OF NEW SOUTH WALES