He has for many years been a senior member of the Law Society Criminal Law Specialist Accreditation Advisory Committee – one of nine lawyers in the state who set and mark assessments in selecting Accredited Specialists in Criminal Law in NSW.

Peter has practised exclusively in criminal law for 14 years. He started his career at the Aboriginal Legal Service at Dubbo and Walgett where he regularly appeared in high volume and complex cases in surrounding country courts in the Central West of NSW.

His skills have been refined over time through results-driven and extremely high workload environments. His distinguished career in government is a testament to his passion for criminal law, having held various senior managerial and specialist court advocacy roles at Legal Aid NSW in metropolitan Sydney and regional NSW.

Peter is highly experienced in defending cases across the broad spectrum of criminal offences, routinely appearing in complex trials, bail applications, sentence proceedings, appeal proceedings and contested hearings in all court jurisdictions in metropolitan Sydney and regional NSW.
