

Leigh Davidson

Principal Solicitor / Managing Director, Advantage Legal

Leigh is one of the founding Principals of Advantage Legal and has spent the better part of his career working in NSW statutory compensation schemes. He has worked as both a defendant and a plaintiff lawyer and has a unique ability to employ collaborative strategies to resolve complex claim dispute issues. In addition to gaining experience in private practice, Leigh spent 8 years working at Insurance Australia Group in a number of different capacities, one of which included advising on the 2017 NSW CTP scheme reforms. He co-founded Advantage Legal in 2018 and has developed a legal practice which incorporates a strong rehabilitation element to achieve ideal client outcomes from both a health and compensation perspective.

Leigh is the current Deputy Chair of the NSW Law Society Injury Compensation Committee, for 2 years he was a DRS Merit Reviewer and in 2021 he appeared before the NSW Parliament Legislative Council Standing Committee on Law and Justice to provide feedback on the operation of the NSW CTP scheme. He has had significant input into a number of CTP reviews and submissions put forward by the NSW Law Society and is a strong advocate for bicycle safety and preparing the legal profession for emerging technologies such as autonomous vehicles.
