

Thought Leadership Series: Protecting human rights in NSW – Is the Queensland model the way forward?

Monday 25 July 2022 – 4.00pm – 6.00pm

Joshua Aird

PhD Candidate and Teaching Fellow, UNSW Law & Justice

Joshua is a PhD candidate at the University of New South Wales. His research focuses on the extent to which new Commonwealth model rights charters reflect the culture of justification. His research is principally focused on the first two years of operation of the Queensland Human Rights Act in a domestic and international comparative context.

Joshua is also a practicing solicitor in NSW with a focus on business human rights. Joshua holds a Bachelor of Laws with first class honours from Victoria University of Wellington.
